

Hegira

All the accumulated knowledge of Hegiras First-Born is graven on giant Obelisks that tower into the sky; beyond mankind's power to reach and read. But as knowledge advances, so the enigmas of the giant planets' nature grow steadily more impossible to understand.

Hegira (from the Arabic hijra, which means breaking off relations, abandoning one's tribe, or migrating) refers to the departure of the Prophet Muhammad from Mecca. It made an indelible impression on a number of people during the course of his hegira, most of whom spent only a few days in his company, a week. The Hijri year (Arabic: هجري) or era is the era used in the Islamic lunar calendar, which begins its count from the Islamic New Year in 622 AD.
